Find out why doctors can't prescribe your brand, and what you can do about it

Market barriers affect nearly a quarter of cancer pain prescriptions in the US, and most brands lose market share because of them. According to the medical oncologists we surveyed, that's a problem with no single solution; many of them experience as many as 3 different barriers with any given brand, and for some brands that grows to 4.

Find out which barriers cost your brand the most market share, which competitors are taking it from you, and what you can do to win it back, in Market Access Impact: Cancer Pain (US).

Based on a survey of 100 medical oncologists, the report covers 6 major therapies from Teva, Mallinckrodt, Endo Pharmaceuticals, Purdue Pharma and Insys Therapeutics. Handy graphs and charts show you how 7 barriers affect your market share, revealing which competitors you gain share from, and lose it to.

Based on a survey of 150 medical oncologists from the EU5 countries (France, Germany, Italy Spain, UK), the report covers 10 major therapies from AstraZeneca, Boehringer Ingelheim, Bristol-Myers Squibb, Eli Lilly, Merck Sharpe & Dohme, Novartis, Pfizer/Merck Group, and Roche.

No single barrier is to blame. 17% to 25% of surveyed doctors experience 3 or more barriers with the surveyed brands, with some experiencing 4 barriers.

Some brands have a perception problem. Up to 20% of doctors either wouldn't consider prescribing five of the surveyed brands, or haven't heard of them at all.

Cost is a huge problem for five brands. Between 25-40% of doctors experience cost barriers with these five brands. That's at least 15% more than the leading competitor.
