Abstracts

Skin-related beauty encompasses a wide range of products and treatments that aim to improve the health, appearance, and overall condition of the skin. It involves various aspects of skincare, including cleansing, moisturizing, treating skin conditions, and enhancing the aesthetics of the skin. The market for skin-related beauty in China is projected to experience significant growth, with an estimated incremental value of USD 87.8 billion and a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of approximately 10.05% during the forecast period from 2023 to 2029.

This industry report provides comprehensive market estimates for the Chinese market, along with a detailed analysis of the different types of skin-related beauty products and treatments available. The market can be segmented into two main categories: skin care and treatment, and skin rejuvenation applications. These segments are further divided based on geographic regions, which include North China, Northeast China, East China, South Central China, Southwest China, and Northwest China.

Within the skin care and treatment segment, there are three subcategories: functional skincare, medical dressing, and general skincare. The general skincare segment is expected to hold the largest market share in the skin-related beauty market in China. Meanwhile, the skin rejuvenation applications market is categorized into collagen, hyaluronic acid, botulinum toxin, and others. Among these, hyaluronic acid held the largest market share in 2022 and is anticipated to maintain its position during the forecast period.
