Abstracts

A Remote Weapon System (RWS) is a military technology that allows a weapon to be operated remotely from a control station. RWS is typically used to mount weapons on vehicles, ships, or other platforms, allowing operators to engage targets without exposing themselves to enemy fire. RWS has several advantages over traditional manned weapon systems. It allows operators to engage targets from a safe distance, reducing the risk of casualties. RWS can be operated by fewer personnel, reducing the size of the crew required to operate a vehicle or ship. Additionally, RWS can be integrated with other sensors and communication systems, allowing operators to share information and coordinate their actions more effectively. The global remote weapon system market is expected to increase by USD 0.1 billion, at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 1.4% from 2023 to 2029, according to the latest edition of the Global Remote Weapon System Market Report.

This industry report offers market estimates of the global market, followed by a detailed analysis of the platform, and region.
