Abstracts

Waterfree urinals are more sustainable than traditional urinals that use water. They save water and reduce the amount of wastewater that needs to be treated. Moreover, there are fewer materials involved in manufacturing, installing, and maintaining a waterfree urinal as water pipes and valves are not necessary. One main advantage of waterfree urinals is that they are cost-effective, as they can save a significant amount of water over their lifetime, which can result in substantial savings on water and wastewater bills. Furthermore, as there are no water pipes or valves involved, there is less risk of leaks or water damage, reducing maintenance costs. Waterfree urinals are also more hygienic than conventional urinals that use water, as there is no stagnant water for bacteria to grow, which ultimately results in improved cleanliness and sanitation in restrooms. The global waterfree urinal market is projected to rise by USD 317.5 million by 2029, according to the latest market study results.
