Abstracts

Interventional cardiology devices are medical devices used in the diagnosis and treatment of cardiovascular disease. These devices are used in minimally invasive procedures that are performed through a small incision or puncture, rather than through open surgery. According to the latest research, the interventional cardiology devices market in Brazil is poised to grow by USD 80.2 million during 2023-2029, progressing at a CAGR of 5.2% during the forecast period. Minimally invasive procedures are becoming increasingly popular among patients and healthcare providers, as they offer several benefits over traditional open surgery, such as reduced risk of infection, shorter hospital stays, and faster recovery times. Interventional cardiology devices are often used in minimally invasive procedures, which is driving demand for these devices.
