Dental collagen membranes are bioresorbable materials used in guided tissue regeneration (GTR) and guided bone regeneration (GBR) procedures within the field of dentistry. These membranes are typically made from highly purified collagen derived from animal sources, such as bovine or porcine tissue. The primary function of dental collagen membranes is to act as a barrier that prevents the ingrowth of soft tissues into areas where bone regeneration is desired, allowing for the proper healing and regeneration of bone and periodontal tissues. Collagen membranes also support wound stabilization and promote tissue integration due to their biocompatibility and ability to be naturally absorbed by the body over time, eliminating the need for a second surgery to remove the membrane. They are widely used in procedures such as dental implants, periodontal surgeries, and bone grafting, helping to improve the outcomes of these treatments by ensuring that the regenerated tissue is properly protected and supported.
