Dental universal composites are versatile materials used in restorative dentistry to fill cavities, restore teeth, and perform other dental procedures. These composites are called 'universal' because they are designed to be used in a variety of clinical situations and different types of restorations. They can be used on both anterior and posterior teeth, making them suitable for different types of restorations. Universal composites are designed to match the natural color of the teeth, providing a more natural appearance compared to older materials. They are usually available in a variety of colors and consistencies, allowing dentists to choose the right color for the specific situation. They usually have good handling characteristics, which makes them easier to use.
