Abstracts

Drug addiction is a chronic, recurrent disease characterized by the uncontrolled application of an addictive drug. In recent years, the abuse of exogenous opioids (such as morphine and heroin) has become a serious social problem. It does not care about the physical and mental health of the abuser himself. It also has disastrous consequences for families and society. Opioid withdrawal is extremely difficult once it is abused.

Scope of the Report:

This report focuses on the Addiction Treatment in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa.
