Abstracts

The global Air Freight Insurance market size is expected to reach $ 28017 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 9.1% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Air Freight Insurance is a risk protection product that covers potential loss, damage, delay, or third-party liability during the transport of goods by air. It typically provides financial compensation to insured parties such as traders, logistics service providers, and manufacturers for losses due to accidents, theft, loss of goods, disasters, or transport disruptions in the global air transport chain. This type of insurance is an important sub-category of cargo insurance, reflecting the compensation needs for specific risks inherent in the high-value, rapid-turnaround characteristics of air transport. The global Air Freight Insurance gross margin is projected to be approximately 15%-30% in 2025.

With the continued growth of global trade and the rapid penetration of cross-border e-commerce, air transport, as a high-value-added and time-sensitive mode of transportation, is experiencing a steady increase in insurance demand. Air freight insurance is an important sub-category of the cargo transportation insurance market, covering the risks of damage, loss, delay, and liability during global air transport. The growth of international air freight volume, the expansion of pharmaceutical cold chain logistics, and the trend towards integrated transportation of high-value, lightweight goods are prompting companies to demand more precise risk management and compensation protection. Meanwhile, the underwriting profit of this type of insurance is affected by the complexity of claims settlement, the frequency of aviation accidents, and the volatility of risks associated with high-value goods, prompting insurance companies to continuously refine their pricing and underwriting strategies and leverage technology.
