Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Annuity Insurance market size was valued at US$ 10166 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 14775 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 5.5% during review period.

Annuity insurance is a type of life insurance in which the policyholder pays the premium in a lump sum or on schedule, and the insurance company promises to pay a fixed amount of insurance benefits to the insured on a regular basis, starting from a specified future time point (such as after retirement), on an annual, semi annual, quarterly, or monthly basis, until the insured's death or contract expiration. Its core function is to convert the funds accumulated by the insured during work into stable, sustained, and life length cash flows after retirement, effectively hedging the risk of pension depletion due to longevity. It is an important financial tool for individuals or groups to plan for retirement and supplement retirement income.

The annuity insurance industry chain covers the upstream asset end (including investment targets such as treasury bond, high-grade credit bonds, infrastructure debt plans, long-term deposits and equity assets that meet regulatory requirements) and reinsurance companies, the midstream product development and underwriting end (life insurance companies and pension insurance companies operating annuity insurance), and the downstream sales and service end (covering bank insurance channels, personal agency channels, group insurance channels and third-party intermediary platforms, and extending to pension communities, health management and other pension service supply). Regarding the gross profit margin, the specific value of the sales gross profit margin of annuity insurance products is not directly disclosed in public information, but industry reports generally use gross profit margin as a key indicator to measure product profitability. It is worth noting that the annuity insurance business is facing 'longevity risk', the risk of interest rate spread loss in a long-term low interest rate environment, and the pressure of fee spread loss caused by product homogenization, all of which have a significant impact on the actual profitability level. Overall, insurance companies emphasize the construction of a full chain closed loop of 'fundraising investment payment service' in the field of pension finance. Pension insurance is more regarded as an entry type business that leverages the pension service ecosystem, and its comprehensive profitability needs to be evaluated in conjunction with the value of backend services.

The core idea of annuity insurance is that it is not an investment tool that pursues short-term high returns, but a 'ballast' financial tool used to hedge longevity risks and lock in lifelong cash flows in the context of long-term interest rate declines and aging population. Its essence is to transform the idle funds of the present into a fixed passive income equal to life after retirement through the compounding effect of time, effectively resisting the economic risk of 'people alive, money gone' caused by the extension of life expectancy. Therefore, the allocation of annuity insurance should not only focus on its relatively low rate of return (usually between 2.5% and 3.5% internal rate of return), but also on the 'certainty' it provides - that is, no matter how volatile the market is, it can provide a stable cash flow at the agreed time, as a safety bottom line for rigid expenditures such as pension and education. From the perspective of asset allocation, annuity insurance plays a defensive role by actively planning now in exchange for passive and certain financial security in the future.
