According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global AOG Services market size was valued at US$ 921 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 1454 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 6.8% during review period.

AOG services, short for 'Aircraft on Grounding' service, is the highest level of emergency support system in the aviation industry. When an aircraft is unable to operate due to mechanical failure, parts shortage, or technical problems, AOG service immediately activates a 24/7 emergency response. By integrating a global spare parts network, professional technicians, and specialized logistics channels, it delivers the necessary parts, tools, equipment, or maintenance teams to the site in the shortest possible time (usually 2-8 hours) to ensure the aircraft is quickly restored to operation. This comprehensive solution, covering fault diagnosis, parts allocation, customs clearance, emergency transportation, and on-site repair, is valued for its ability to minimize operational losses for airlines due to aircraft grounding through efficient resource coordination and emergency response. As the ultimate line of defense in the aviation maintenance support system, AOG service not only reflects the comprehensive technical capabilities of the service provider but is also an indispensable safety guarantee mechanism for the modern air transport network. Its responsiveness directly affects the operational efficiency and economic benefits of airlines.

AOG Services' costs primarily consist of emergency logistics transportation (accounting for over 50%), high-premium aircraft parts procurement, 24/7 on-call teams, and coordination and management costs. Its core business model lies in creating emergency value through extreme response, resulting in a significantly higher gross margin than routine maintenance, typically reaching 40%-60%. This premium is essentially an emergency rescue fee paid by customers to minimize aircraft downtime losses, and its profitability directly depends on the coverage density of its service network and the efficiency of resource coordination.

AOG Services' global service network exhibits a significant regional characteristic, with its layout closely centered around global air transport hubs. Major aviation hubs in North America, Europe, and the Asia-Pacific region constitute the three core areas of global AOG services, with Dubai, leveraging its unique geographical advantages, developing into a crucial support hub between Asia, Europe, and Africa. Mature markets have established well-developed spare parts center networks and standardized response processes, enabling emergency support covering major airports within 2-8 hours; however, service capabilities in emerging markets are still under development, and response times remain challenging in some areas due to logistical and customs constraints. Currently, global AOG services are integrating regional resources and establishing collaborative support mechanisms through a digital platform; however, differences in infrastructure, spare parts reserves, and professional capabilities across regions still result in a significant geographical imbalance in global AOG services.
