Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global ASMR Trigger Props market size was valued at US$ 633 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 952 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 5.1% during review period.

ASMR trigger props are physical sensory props used to create autonomous sensory meridian response content. They mainly generate subtle sounds, tactile feedback, and visual rhythm through tapping, rubbing, squeezing, stretching, scratching, brushing, flowing, popping, slow movement, and repetitive actions, serving scenarios such as sleep-aid audio, relaxation videos, livestream interaction, short-form content creation, stress-relief entertainment, children's sensory play, and special sensory training. This category includes forms such as slime, silicone pop toys, soft rubber squishy toys, foam objects, kinetic sand, wooden tapping blocks, paper and film materials, brushes, realistic soft rubber food-shaped toys, transparent sensory bottles, and themed sets. Its core value is not to provide a one-time entertainment function like traditional toys, but to offer trigger materials that can be continuously captured, repeatedly displayed, and flexibly combined for microphones, cameras, and user perception. Major customers include content creators, ASMR audiences, stress-relief toy consumers, child users, educational institutions, therapeutic support institutions, and gift consumers.

The industrial boundary of ASMR trigger props is highly cross-category, so companies should not be screened only by whether they explicitly use an ASMR label. A large share of actual supply comes from slime, soft rubber squishy toys, silicone pop toys, sensory education toys, stress-relief toys, and creator prop brands. These products enter the ASMR content production chain through sound, tactile feedback, and visual rhythm.

Demand growth in this category is mainly driven by content platforms, sleep-aid consumption, stress-relief toys, and special sensory training. Creators need to continuously purchase new props to differentiate their content, while ordinary consumers use some of these products for relaxation, focus, and gift purchases. Educational and therapeutic support scenarios further expand the stable demand base for tactile products.

In terms of supply regions, companies in the United States and Canada are relatively active in slime, sensory toys, and educational toys. Japanese companies have distinctive strengths in soft rubber, realistic tactile products, and pop-style products. South Korean companies are more focused on DIY slime and craft materials. Chinese companies have greater scale advantages in silicone, soft rubber, pop toys, charms, and OEM/ODM supply. Future growth will concentrate on themed sets, creator co-branded props, realistic soft rubber items, low-noise high-texture recording props, and customized trigger combinations.
