The global Asynchronous Video Interview Software market size is expected to reach $ 595 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.9% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Asynchronous video interview software is a digital recruitment tool that allows candidates to record their interview responses in a non-real-time environment, which can then be viewed and evaluated by companies at any time. Platforms typically offer features such as preset questions, recorded video Q&A, time limits, re-recording settings, automatic transcription, structured scoring sheets, team collaboration evaluation, candidate management, and integration with ATS/HRIS. Some advanced systems also possess AI-driven capabilities such as speech recognition, content analysis, facial expression and behavior analysis, and automatic scoring. This software solves problems in traditional interviews such as scheduling difficulties, high costs of cross-time zone communication, and low initial screening efficiency, enabling companies to process a large number of candidates in a short time while allowing candidates to complete interviews at their own convenient time, thus significantly improving recruitment efficiency and flexibility.

The growth of asynchronous video interview software is primarily driven by large-scale recruitment needs, the widespread adoption of remote work, increased cross-time zone recruitment, and companies' pursuit of efficient initial screening. It allows companies to quickly screen large numbers of candidates without real-time communication, making it particularly suitable for high-volume scenarios such as campus recruitment, customer service/sales positions, and blue-collar recruitment. Meanwhile, the maturity of AI technology has also enabled asynchronous interviews to achieve greater automation, such as automatic transcription, content analysis, and initial scoring. However, differences in candidate experience, concerns about the fairness of AI assessments, data privacy compliance requirements, and the need for real-time interaction in some positions still limit its widespread adoption. In the future, asynchronous video interviews will develop towards greater intelligence, personalization, and compliance. Deep integration with ATS/HRIS and AI-assisted decision-making will become core competitive advantages, making it an indispensable initial screening tool in corporate recruitment processes.
