The global Bleached Broadleaf Pulp market size is expected to reach $ million by 2029, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

Pulp is a raw material made from plant fiber (mainly wood chips), which is chemically or mechanically removed from the wood chips to retain cellulose and hemicellulose. The downstream pulp industry is mainly the papermaking industry, which is an important raw material in the papermaking process. Overall, the cost of pulp accounts for 50-70% of the cost of downstream pulp and paper mills, which greatly affects the overall profitability of paper mills.

Pulp is a fibrous substance made from plant fibers through different processing methods, and is the main raw material of the paper industry. Broad-leaved tree species, as opposed to coniferous and common-leaved woods. Grows in the tropics and partly in the subtropics.
