Abstracts

The global Blue Film Tape market size is expected to reach $ million by 2030, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2024-2030).

Blue film tape is a sticky material used for surface protection. It is mainly used for the protection of glass, aluminum plates, steel plates, plastic plates, etc., as well as the cutting and packaging of semiconductor chips. It is characterized by its blue color, unchanged viscosity, insensitivity to ultraviolet rays, and low price, but it is easily affected by temperature and produces residual glue. Compared with UV film tape, the viscosity of UV film tape can be adjusted by the irradiation time and intensity of ultraviolet rays. It is suitable for small-sized chips, but the cost is higher and the validity period is shorter.

This report studies the global Blue Film Tape production, demand, key manufacturers, and key regions.
