According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Bowling Equipment market size was valued at USD million in 2023 and is forecast to a readjusted size of USD million by 2030 with a CAGR of % during review period.

Bowling ball is a sporting equipment used in the bowling sport to hit bowling pins. Coverstock and weight block are the two main parts of a bowling ball. Coverstock, which is the outer shell of the ball, is considered the most influential part of the ball, as it gets in contact with the lane surface. On the other hand, weight block is the core part of the bowling ball that determines how the ball will perform in terms of acceleration, rotation and curvature. Raw materials used to manufacture bowling balls are polyester, urethane, and reactive resin. The history of bowling balls dates to the ancient Egyptian protodynastic period in 3200 BC, where husk of grains, covered in leather and bound with strings, were used as bowling balls.

One driver in the market is the growing millennial population. People who are born between 1980 and 2000 are called millennials. Millennials make up a large part of the population and have high earnings although most of them are in their twenties. Millennials have become a major target for a wide range of businesses recently, and the bowling industry is no exception. Millennials are more concerned about their health and fitness than Generation X (born between the 1960s and 1980s) and baby boomers (born between the 1940s and 1960s). In the US, around 60% of the millennials engage in fitness sports such as running and bowling. They consume less alcohol and participate in activities that promote fitness and health. They look for trendy activities that endorse health and fitness as well as provide an environment for socializing with friends. They enjoy connecting with others and socializing. Thus, they look for activities that provide ample scope for socializing and are popular.
