Abstracts

The global Business Broker Service market size is expected to reach $ 906100 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 6.2% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

To address the problems of information asymmetry, low matching efficiency, and inefficient allocation of market resources in traditional transaction models, commercial brokerage services emerged. Since the advent of modern commercial brokerage services in the late 19th century, the market transaction and circulation field has developed significantly. Currently, commercial brokerage services have evolved into a comprehensive service encompassing real estate brokerage, property rights transaction brokerage, corporate mergers and acquisitions brokerage, and asset transfer brokerage, widely applied in areas such as corporate investment and financing, commodity circulation, and personal asset allocation. These services effectively reduce transaction costs and improve resource allocation efficiency.

Commercial brokerage services are currently in a critical period of transformation in the 'stock era,' with the industry upgrading towards specialization, digitalization, and ecosystem development. Enterprises need to address challenges and seize growth opportunities brought about by emerging markets, policy support, and technological integration through technological empowerment (such as AI/blockchain), service innovation (such as wealth management/green trade), and compliant operations (such as data security/ESG). In the future, commercial brokerage services will be deeply integrated into the global supply chain restructuring and the digital economy wave, becoming a core hub connecting supply and demand, optimizing resource allocation, and promoting the construction of a more efficient, transparent, and sustainable business ecosystem.
