Abstracts

The global Business Text Messaging Service market size is expected to reach $ 1058 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.6% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

To address the inefficiencies, high costs, and inconsistent reach of point-to-point information transmission between businesses and customers, commercial SMS services have emerged. Since the widespread adoption of mobile communication and the rise of corporate digital marketing needs in the early 21st century, this service has evolved from basic text messaging to a standardized enterprise communication solution integrating intelligent triggering, identity verification, user notifications, marketing interactions, and customer service. Currently, commercial SMS services have developed into a professional communication tool covering multiple scenarios such as verification code SMS, industry notifications, and marketing promotions, deeply integrated into e-commerce, financial services, logistics tracking, government reminders, and membership management. It ensures efficient, accurate, and secure information delivery, significantly improving enterprise operational efficiency and end-user experience.

Commercial SMS services, as an efficient tool for businesses to reach their customers, continue to see strong demand in finance, e-commerce, and logistics. The future requires focusing on intelligent upgrades, rich media integration, and ecological development, overcoming technological barriers and compliance challenges. By leveraging technologies such as AI, 5G, and blockchain, it can improve user experience and security, support enterprise digital transformation and industrial upgrading, while also addressing challenges such as spam message control and increasing market competition, and seizing development opportunities brought by the Internet of Things and policy support.
