B2B media refers to the communication channel between the vendors and their customers. For a B2B vendor, the customer cannot necessarily be a consumer. Business organizations constitute the customers of B2B vendors and require a different media mix to get business from them. For instance, if a vendor has to pitch in for hydraulic hose pipes, an engineer from the company will bring his engineering experience into the discussion to justify the decision to the superiors, who work in the same field. In contrast, the home owner will care little about the technicalities in the manufacturing of hose pipes that are being used in the garden.
