Abstracts

Calcium chloride is an inorganic, colorless, crystalline salt, which is highly soluble in water. This inorganic compound finds important application in de-icing operations, and in dust control. The calcium chloride anhydrous salt is hygroscopic in nature, and hence is also used as a desiccating agent.

Scope of the Report:

This report focuses on the Calcium Chloride in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa. This report categorizes the market based on manufacturers, regions, type and application. The global calcium chloride market is developing due to rising usage of calcium chloride in the process of de-icing. Therefore, in nations where the after-effects of heavy snowfall are hard to oversee, calcium chloride is utilized. There are various nations using calcium chloride such as the U.S., Japan, and Canada. Dust control is another application for which the demand for calcium chloride is growing. As calcium chloride holds the moisture for a long time, it is utilized on unpaved streets for removing dust. The affordability factor of calcium chloride is major reason behind its utilization on street surfaces. The development of this market is likely to be limited by the lessened overall revenues because of an oversupply of cheap materials in the market, as calcium chloride can be produced utilizing different techniques. Corrosive nature of calcium chloride is another factor hampering the development of the market. The North American region was the biggest market for calcium chloride in 2013. It accounted for over 40 percent of the total market share. Europe also accounted for a healthy market share being the 2nd largest market in 2013. Since it works as a de-icing agent, there is a huge demand for calcium chloride in the North American region due to the extreme cold weather conditions. Asia Pacific is also projected to experience a huge growth mainly due to the increasing market demands for calcium chloride from various end use industries. In addition to this, increased expenditure on infrastructural developments by governments is likely to spur the global calcium chloride market growth in the next six years. The manufacturing corporations of calcium chloride have a considerable effect on the value chain through a higher level of forward integration. All these manufacturing companies not only manufacture raw materials but also the final product and utilize it in several applications such as Dust control & de-icing, constructions, medicines, food, and so on. The regional market for calcium chloride in the Middle East & Africa is projected to grow at a slow rate. However, on the other hand, the demand for calcium chloride in gas & oil as well as dust control applications is expected to grow significantly in this region in the next six years. The worldwide market for Calcium Chloride is expected to grow at a CAGR of roughly xx% over the next five years, will reach xx million US$ in 2023, from xx million US$ in 2017, according to a new GIR (Global Info Research) study.
