Cannabigerol, or CBG, is a non-psychoactive cannabinoid that is one of the many chemical compounds found within the cannabis plant. It's often referred to as the "stem cell" or "mother" of all cannabinoids because it serves as the precursor for the development of other major cannabinoids, including tetrahydrocannabinol (THC) and cannabidiol (CBD). CBG is produced in the early stages of the cannabis plant's growth, and as the plant matures, it undergoes enzymatic changes that convert CBG into other cannabinoids, making it a relatively rare compound in mature cannabis plants.
