Abstracts

The global Cargo Ferry Service market size is expected to reach $ 2863 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.9% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Cargo Ferry Service refers to the scheduled or on-demand transportation service provided by shipping companies using Ro-Ro cargo ships, Ro-Pax passenger/cargo ships, railway ferries, or other short-distance ferries on straits, bays, islands, coastal waterways, and inland waterways. This service transports trucks, semi-trailers, container chassis, engineering vehicles, railway vehicles, and other roll-on/roll-off cargo. Its core feature is that cargo units can be directly driven into or towed into the ship's hold via ramps and quickly derailed upon arrival at port, reducing hoisting and unloading processes. Market statistics should include cargo revenue from pure cargo ferries and Ro-Pax vessels, but exclude passenger ticket revenue, ocean-going car carriers, general container liner services, port handling, and land-based logistics revenue.

The global freight ferry market maintained steady growth overall, primarily driven by demand from cross-sea road transport, island supply, short-haul shipping to Europe, and passenger/roll-on/roll-off (Ro-Ro) transport to Asia. Driver shortages, driving time regulations, and road congestion are promoting "non-trailer" transport, allowing logistics companies to arrange tractors at both ends of the port, thereby improving vehicle and driver utilization. Fleet upgrades are gradually shifting towards LNG, methanol, biofuels, battery hybrid power, shore power, and air lubrication technologies; for example, Finnlines' new hybrid Ro-Ro vessels offer approximately 5,800 lane meters and a capacity of about 400 semi-trailers. Finnlines' fleet information shows that larger vessels and lower emissions are progressing simultaneously. Regulations such as the European Emissions Trading System (EETS) and FuelEU Maritime increase short-term costs but also accelerate the replacement of older vessels; meanwhile, digital booking, dynamic freight rates, automatic vehicle identification, paperless customs, and port reservation systems are reducing vehicle waiting times. The future market will continue to be affected by fuel prices, port congestion, trade fluctuations, geopolitics, and high ship investment. Major operators are expected to continue expanding network coverage through route consolidation, mergers and acquisitions, and intermodal transport.
