According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Cat Medical Insurance market size was valued at US$ 1924 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 3239 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 7.8% during review period.

Cat medical insurance is a commercial health insurance designed specifically for domestic cats. It aims to help cat owners share the high costs of veterinary treatment, surgery, and medication required due to illness, injury or accidents of their cats.

The global market for cat medical insurance is experiencing significant growth, driven by the ever-rising status of pets within the family unit; as one of the primary companion animals, the need for health protection for cats is receiving increasing attention. In mature markets such as Europe and North America, cat insurance products are already relatively widespread, and service infrastructures are well-established. Conversely, in emerging regions?including parts of Asia and Latin America?insurance awareness is rapidly awakening alongside an expanding population of cat owners and rising veterinary care costs. Key drivers of this market expansion include: the intensifying tension between cat owners' desire for high-quality veterinary care and the prohibitive cost of treatment, which fuels the demand for risk transfer; a younger generation of pet owners who are more inclined to utilize financial instruments to manage their pets' healthcare expenses; and insurance companies that are continuously refining their product designs to offer multi-tiered coverage?ranging from accidents and acute illnesses to chronic conditions and preventive care?while leveraging digital platforms to enhance the policy enrollment and claims experience. Furthermore, the expansion of veterinary hospital networks, the growing prevalence of animal welfare philosophies, and the dissemination of pet health-related topics via social media are collectively contributing to the deepening and broadening of the global market for pet cat health insurance.
