Abstracts

The global Complete Cat Food market size is expected to reach $ 71519 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 7.0% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032). In 2025, global production of complete cat food is estimated at approximately 20.5 million tons, with an average selling price of about USD 2,200 per ton. Complete cat food refers to formulated cat food products that can independently meet the full nutritional requirements of cats at different life stages (kitten, adult, and senior) without the need for additional supplementation. These products must comply with national pet food regulations and nutritional standards, with strict requirements for the balance of protein, fat, amino acids, vitamins, and minerals. Complete cat food spans multiple formats, including extruded dry food, wet food, low-temperature baked food, and air-dried food, and represents the most mainstream and widely used category in the global cat food market.

From a market perspective, complete cat food accounts for the dominant share of overall cat food consumption and remains the primary long-term choice for most households. As cat owners become more knowledgeable, purchasing decisions are increasingly driven by formulation transparency, animal protein sources, functional segmentation, and ingredient safety rather than the basic 'complete' designation alone. Market trends indicate rising demand for high-meat, grain-free or low-grain formulas, as well as functional complete cat food targeting urinary health, digestive health, and coat care. Industry consensus suggests that complete cat food will continue to serve as the core pillar of the cat food market, with future growth driven mainly by product upgrading rather than volume expansion.
