CPT Crawler is a heavy-duty machine used for soil exploration and geological surveys. It moves stably on various terrains via a crawler system and is equipped with a static penetration test device to measure the bearing capacity and density of the soil. The static penetration test technology evaluates geological conditions and soil properties by gradually applying vertical pressure and recording the soil's response at different depths. This equipment is often used in construction projects, infrastructure construction, and environmental assessments to provide accurate soil data to support decision-making.
