Cross-border e-commerce payment and collection systems serve as a means of collecting and paying funds for cross-border e-commerce transactions. They encompass consumer payments, platform payments, supplier payments, overseas warehouse fees, logistics settlements, tax payments, and fund aggregation. Typically, they feature multi-currency accounts, global acquiring, foreign exchange conversion, bulk payments, automatic reconciliation, risk control, and compliance management.

Upstream partners primarily include commercial banks, bank card organizations, clearing networks, foreign exchange liquidity institutions, cloud computing, and identity authentication and anti-fraud service providers. Downstream partners cover cross-border e-commerce platforms, independent website sellers, brand owners, suppliers, logistics companies, overseas warehouses, marketing agencies, and domestic and international consumers.

The future global cross-border e-commerce payment and collection market will evolve towards integration, localization, real-time processing, and intelligence. Service platforms will continue to expand multi-currency accounts and local payment methods in various countries, helping merchants improve payment success rates, shorten fund arrival cycles, and reduce exchange costs. Functions such as collection, payment, currency exchange, fund management, tax declaration, and automatic reconciliation will be further integrated to form a comprehensive financial service covering the entire transaction process. Artificial intelligence will be increasingly applied to fraud detection, compliance review, transaction routing, and exchange rate risk management. As payment regulations become increasingly stringent in various countries, licensing coverage, data security, anti-money laundering capabilities, and consumer protection will become key areas of competition. Meanwhile, open APIs and embedded financial technologies will drive deep integration of payment systems with e-commerce platforms, ERP systems, logistics, and financial software.
