According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Debt Adjustment market size was valued at US$ 10413 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 15036 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 5.4% during review period.

Debt liquidation refers to the act of offsetting, settling, paying off or restructuring the rights and obligations between the debtor and the creditor through legal or agreed procedures in a debt relationship, in order to completely settle the rights and obligations of both parties. Its core goal is to clarify the total amount, term, and repayment method of debt through systematic cleaning and accounting, and to dispose of assets, transfer funds, or reduce debt in accordance with laws or agreements, ultimately leading to the elimination of debt. At the individual level, debt settlement typically involves settling outstanding debts such as credit cards and loans through installment payments, negotiated reductions, or asset realization; At the enterprise level, it may involve reconciliation of accounts receivable and payable, asset offsetting, or centralized liquidation through bankruptcy reorganization procedures; At the national level, debt liquidation is sometimes achieved through debt restructuring, extensions, or reductions. This process is of great significance for maintaining financial order, preventing systemic risks, and helping debtors achieve financial rebirth.

The debt liquidation industry chain mainly includes upstream non-performing asset suppliers (such as banks, trusts, and other financial institutions, as well as entity enterprises facing debt crises), midstream asset disposal and service institutions (including licensed asset management companies AMC, professional debt restructuring consultants, liquidation firms, and debt collection agencies), and downstream asset final disposal end (including industry investors after asset restructuring, buyers of non-performing asset packages, and various legal service providers). The gross profit margin of the industrial chain shows a clear 'smile curve' differentiation due to differences in service models and technological content: licensed AMCs and technology empowered disposal institutions in the midstream rely on license barriers and technological advantages to maintain high gross profit margins, with non-performing asset disposal businesses generally having gross profit margins of over 70%.

Debt liquidation has evolved from the traditional passive and passive 'bad debt write off' or 'bankruptcy closure' to an indispensable 'risk clearance' and 'resource activation' mechanism in modern economic cycles. Its value goes far beyond the cancellation of book figures, but rather through specialized means such as bankruptcy reorganization, debt to equity swaps, and asset restructuring within the legal framework, it forcibly divests and reallocates inefficient, idle, and even mismatched social resources, helping struggling enterprises or high debt individuals achieve financial 'light combat' or orderly exit. Especially in the context of macroeconomic pressure and structural deleveraging, an efficient debt liquidation system is not only a 'safety valve' to safeguard the rights and interests of creditors, but also a 'purifier' to eliminate outdated production capacity and promote industrial upgrading. Therefore, the essence of debt liquidation is a serious economic 'surgical operation', and its success or failure not only determines the fate of the distressed subjects, but also directly affects the stability of the regional financial system and the efficiency of resource allocation in the whole society. From this perspective, professional debt settlement services have evolved from simple judicial procedures to a comprehensive intelligent decision-making science that integrates finance, law, and industrial operations.
