Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Dog Food OEM market size was valued at US$ 15471 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 22358 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 5.5% during review period.

Dog food OEM refers to the large-scale production and processing services of dog food by professional pet food manufacturers based on the formulas, standards, or product design requirements of brand owners or distributors. The OEM typically handles all aspects of the process, including raw material procurement, formula production, processing, quality testing, packaging, and export compliance, while the brand owner focuses on brand operation, channel sales, and marketing. This model is essentially a 'manufacturing outsourcing system' in the pet food industry chain, improving production efficiency, lowering barriers to entry for brands, and enabling rapid product iteration and global supply through specialized division of labor.

The dog food OEM industry is currently a core beneficiary of the rapid growth of the global pet economy. Future growth will be primarily driven by the 'humanized consumption upgrade' of pets, increased demand for high-end functional pet food, and the trend towards asset-light brands. As pet owners' demand for nutritional formulas, grain-free foods, freeze-dried foods, and functional health foods increases, brands are increasingly relying on professional OEM/ODM factories for product development and rapid mass production. Meanwhile, China and Southeast Asia, with their cost advantages and production scale, are becoming global pet food manufacturing centers, while the European and American markets focus more on high-end R&D and brand control. The industry will develop towards 'high-end formulas + intelligent production + global supply chain integration' in the future.
