Abstracts

The global Dog and Cat Pet Insurance market size is expected to reach $ 21012 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 12.0% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Dog and Cat Pet Insurance is a type of commercial insurance product that provides medical expense reimbursement, accidental injury claims, critical illness coverage, and extended liability insurance for pet dogs and cats. It aims to reduce the financial burden of veterinary and accident costs for pet owners. Typical coverage amounts range from $1,000 to $20,000, covering outpatient visits, surgery, hospitalization, medications, imaging examinations, and treatment for designated genetic diseases. Underwriting and pricing are based on the pet's breed, age, health condition, basic deductible, and reimbursement rate, with common reimbursement rates ranging from 50% to 90%. With the continuous rise in pet medical costs, the increasing number of pets in households, the growing trend of anthropomorphizing pets, and the development of professional pet hospital chains, pet insurance has gradually become one of the fastest-growing segments of the pet economy. Penetration rates are high in North America, the UK, and Japan, while China, Southeast Asia, and Latin America are experiencing rapid growth. Overall, pet insurance for dogs and cats is evolving towards higher coverage amounts, no-claims discounts, chronic disease management, digital health records, and direct settlement with pet hospitals. Its commercial value will further increase as the pet medical system improves.
