Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Domestic Helper Agency market size was valued at US$ 362182 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 618210 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 7.9% during review period.

A Domestic Helper Agency (also known as a household service agency or maid agency) is an organization that acts as an intermediary between households seeking domestic assistance and individuals seeking employment as domestic workers. These agencies provide recruitment, screening, training, placement, and ongoing support services for various domestic roles.

The global domestic helper agency market is positioned at the intersection of several powerful trends: demographic aging, rising dual-income households, growing demand for specialized services, digital platform adoption, and government policy support for formalization.

The market is characterized by a fundamental structural tension between the dominant agency/matching model and the government-promoted employee-based model. The agency model offers cost advantages and scalability but struggles with quality control and worker protections. The employee model provides better quality assurance and worker benefits but faces higher cost structures. Government policies are tilting toward employee-based models, creating both challenges and opportunities for market participants .

For agencies, the path forward requires embracing digital platforms, developing specialized service capabilities, transitioning toward employee-based models where viable, and building training infrastructure. For investors, the market offers opportunities in platform leaders, premium service specialists, and training/certification providers. For policymakers, the focus should remain on accelerating professionalization, supporting employee model transition, and addressing the deep-seated labor shortage through improved working conditions and social recognition.
