Abstracts

The global Domestic Helper Insurance market size is expected to reach $ 7501 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 7.0% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Domestic helper insurance is a comprehensive insurance product specifically designed for domestic workers. It primarily covers risks such as personal injury, illness, accidents, medical expenses, disability, death compensation, and third-party liability for domestic helpers during their work. It also provides employers with legal liability protection, wage compensation, repatriation costs, and property loss protection. This type of insurance is particularly mature in regions heavily reliant on foreign domestic helpers, such as Hong Kong, Singapore, Malaysia, and the Middle East, and is even legally mandatory in some countries. With the professionalization of domestic services and the development of aging societies, domestic helper insurance is gradually expanding from traditional 'employer's liability insurance' to a comprehensive family labor protection system encompassing medical care, health management, digital claims processing, cross-border labor risks, and long-term care protection.

The domestic helper insurance market has strong future growth prospects. Key driving factors include accelerated global aging, the increase in dual-income families, expanded cross-border labor mobility, and improved government labor laws. Some countries in Asia, the Middle East, and Europe are strengthening the protection of the legal rights of domestic helpers, gradually shifting employer's liability insurance from 'optional' to 'semi-mandatory or mandatory,' significantly driving market expansion. Meanwhile, the increasing demand for long-term care, the trend of home-based elderly care, the professionalization of childcare services, and the higher risk management requirements of high-net-worth families are also driving the upgrade of insurance products towards higher coverage, multi-scenario, and digital services. In the future, the industry will further integrate AI claims processing, telemedicine, cross-border health management, flexible employment platforms, and embedded insurance models to form an ecosystem of 'domestic service platform + insurance + healthcare.' Southeast Asia, Hong Kong, Singapore, the Middle East, and the European immigration market will continue to be the fastest-growing regions globally.
