Abstracts

The global Employee Health Consulting Services market size is expected to reach $ 1803.5 million by 2029, rising at a market growth of 6.3% CAGR during the forecast period (2023-2029).

Growing demand: As employees pay more and more attention to health issues, companies are also paying more attention to their employees' health status. Therefore, the demand for employee health consulting services is growing.

Expansion of service scope: Employee health consulting services will expand from general physical examinations and health assessments to broader health management fields. Including health consultation, mental health services, nutritional guidance, fitness guidance, etc.

Increased application of technology: With the application of big data, artificial intelligence and other technologies, employee health consulting services will become more intelligent and personalized. For example, big data is used to analyze health data, and artificial intelligence is used for health advice and early warning.

Improvement in professionalism: As the demand for employee health consulting services increases, the professionalism of the services will also continue to improve. Including the professional quality of service personnel, standardization of service processes, improvement of service standards, etc.

Integration with medical insurance: Employee health consulting services will be more closely integrated with medical insurance. For example, employees can reimburse part of the cost of health consulting services through medical insurance, and insurance companies will also provide a wider range of health management services for employees to choose from.

Increased employee participation: Employees will be more involved in health management services, such as choosing services independently, participating in health activities, etc., which will promote employees' acceptance and effectiveness of services.

Reflection of corporate social responsibility: Companies are paying more and more attention to their social responsibilities. By providing employee health consulting services, they can better pay attention to the health and well-being of employees and enhance the company's social image.
