Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global ESG Assurance market size was valued at US$ 2572 million in 2025 and is forecast to a readjusted size of US$ 6776 million by 2032 with a CAGR of 14.6% during review period.

ESG Assurance refers to the independent professional service provided by a third-party organization (typically audit firms or specialized certification bodies) to verify and validate the Environmental, Social, and Governance information disclosed by a company. Following established assurance standards (such as ISAE 3000 or the upcoming ISSA 5000), practitioners examine the reliability and accuracy of ESG metrics and qualitative claims. The primary goal of ESG assurance is to enhance the credibility of non-financial disclosures for stakeholders—including investors, regulators, and customers—thereby mitigating 'greenwashing' risks and ensuring that sustainability data is as robust and trustworthy as financial data.

From a market perspective, ESG Assurance is undergoing a structural transformation from a peripheral compliance-related service into a foundational trust infrastructure within global capital markets. In its early stage, ESG disclosure was largely voluntary, with relatively flexible expectations regarding data quality and comparability. However, with the progressive tightening of global regulatory frameworks—most notably the EU Corporate Sustainability Reporting Directive (CSRD) and the standards developed by the International Sustainability Standards Board (ISSB)—ESG reporting is increasingly transitioning from soft disclosure practices to quasi-financial reporting requirements. This shift has significantly accelerated demand for third-party assurance services, positioning ESG Assurance as a critical gateway for capital market access, institutional funding, and cross-border regulatory compliance.

On the demand side, the expansion of ESG Assurance is driven by three major forces. First, capital market pressure: institutional investors globally are incorporating ESG metrics into risk pricing and valuation models, placing greater emphasis on data reliability, comparability, and consistency, thereby compelling companies to adopt independent assurance mechanisms. Second, regulatory enforcement: an increasing number of jurisdictions now require external verification of key sustainability indicators such as carbon emissions, climate-related risks, and labor standards, effectively establishing a parallel assurance regime alongside traditional financial audits. Third, corporate strategy considerations: multinational companies are leveraging ESG Assurance to enhance supply chain transparency, mitigate compliance risks, and strengthen brand credibility, particularly in export-oriented industries where ESG compliance is becoming a market entry requirement.

On the supply side, the ESG Assurance market remains relatively early-stage and is currently dominated by global accounting networks and large consulting firms, particularly the Big Four audit firms. In parallel, a growing number of specialized providers focusing on carbon accounting, supply chain verification, and sustainability data assurance are emerging. However, the industry is still characterized by significant methodological fragmentation, including inconsistent definitions of limited versus reasonable assurance, variations in data boundary setting, and divergent verification methodologies across jurisdictions. This lack of standardization indicates that the market has not yet reached full global convergence, leaving substantial room for future consolidation and methodological harmonization.

In the long-term perspective, ESG Assurance is not merely an extension of traditional auditing services, but rather an emerging global infrastructure for validating non-financial information. As ESG data becomes increasingly integrated into investment decision-making, credit rating systems, and asset pricing models, ESG Assurance will evolve from a verification tool into a pre-pricing mechanism that influences capital allocation. Ultimately, its significance lies not only in validating reported data, but in enabling ESG information to achieve parity with financial data within capital markets, thereby reshaping corporate valuation frameworks and competitive dynamics on a global scale.

This report is a detailed and comprehensive analysis for global ESG Assurance market. Both quantitative and qualitative analyses are presented by company, by region & country, by Type and by Application. As the market is constantly changing, this report explores the competition, supply and demand trends, as well as key factors that contribute to its changing demands across many markets. Company profiles and product examples of selected competitors, along with market share estimates of some of the selected leaders for the year 2025, are provided.

Key Features:

Global ESG Assurance market size and forecasts, in consumption value ($ Million), 2021-2032

Global ESG Assurance market size and forecasts by region and country, in consumption value ($ Million), 2021-2032

Global ESG Assurance market size and forecasts, by Type and by Application, in consumption value ($ Million), 2021-2032

Global ESG Assurance market shares of main players, in revenue ($ Million), 2021-2026

The Primary Objectives in This Report Are:

- To determine the size of the total market opportunity of global and key countries
- To assess the growth potential for ESG Assurance
- To forecast future growth in each product and end-use market
- To assess competitive factors affecting the marketplace

This report profiles key players in the global ESG Assurance market based on the following parameters - company overview, revenue, gross margin, product portfolio, geographical presence, and key developments. Key companies covered as a part of this study include PwC, Deloitte, EY, KPMG, SGS, Bureau Veritas, Intertek, T?V S?D, DNV, ERM (Environmental Resources Management), etc.

This report also provides key insights about market drivers, restraints, opportunities, new product launches or approvals.
