Fixed Bed Gasifier is a gasification device that converts solid fuel (such as biomass, coal or garbage) into combustible gas through thermochemical reaction. Its structural characteristics are that the fuel is accumulated on a fixed bed, and the gasification medium (air, oxygen or steam) reacts through the fuel bed to generate synthesis gas (Syngas), the main components of which are carbon monoxide, hydrogen and methane. Fixed bed gasifier is simple to operate and has low energy consumption. It is suitable for small-scale energy production, especially in distributed energy systems and energy supply in rural areas.
