Garlic sauce is a semi-fluid or paste-like compound condiment made primarily from garlic (garlic cloves) through processes such as mixing, seasoning, and sterilization. Essentially a processed garlic product, it features more stable formulations, longer shelf life, and more consistent flavor, characteristic of standardized commodities. The upstream core is agricultural products, primarily garlic, which also include chili peppers, cooking oil, salt, sugar, and other seasonings. The downstream reaches a vast consumer market, primarily through diverse online and offline channels. Global sales are projected to reach approximately 7.5 million tons in 2024, with an average market price of around US$1,100 per ton. Gross margins for the industry are expected to be between 15% and 30%.

The development of the garlic sauce industry has primarily benefited from the dual growth in demand from the catering industry and household consumption. The continued development of the catering industry has provided a stable B2B demand for garlic sauce. At the household consumption level, garlic sauce meets consumers' needs for convenient and efficient cooking solutions.
