Abstracts

Gel electrophoresis is a method for separation and analysis of macromolecules (DNA, RNA and proteins) and their fragments, based on their size and charge. It is used in clinical chemistry to separate proteins by charge and/or size (IEF agarose, essentially size independent) and in biochemistry and molecular biology to separate a mixed population of DNA and RNA fragments by length, to estimate the size of DNA and RNA fragments or to separate proteins by charge.

Scope of the Report:

This report focuses on the Gel Electrophoresis in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa. This report categorizes the market based on manufacturers, regions, type and application. Personalized medicine is an umbrella term used for treatments tailor-made to suit individual patients' anatomy and morphology. Personalized medicines greatly increase the efficacy of treatments through companion diagnostics and genetic testing. These drugs minimize any adverse effects the treatment may have on the patient. Gel electrophoresis techniques are widely adopted in the field of personal medicine to accurately map and analyze the abnormal tissues or molecules responsible for causing the illness. Electrophoresis techniques such as two-dimensional difference gel electrophoresis provide quantitative, sensitive, reproducible, high-throughput, and exhaustive global protein expression profiling.

The Americas accounted for the majority market share during 2016 and will continue to dominate the market during the forecasted period. Some of the major factors responsible for the market's growth in the region is the increasing number of government funding and investments, collaborations and acquisitions, the presence of a number of research labs and academic institutions, and investments by pharmaceutical and biotechnological companies.

The worldwide market for Gel Electrophoresis is expected to grow at a CAGR of roughly xx% over the next five years, will reach xx million US$ in 2023, from xx million US$ in 2017, according to a new GIR (Global Info Research) study.
