Abstracts

General-purpose disk arrays (GPDAs) satisfy the storage needs of applications and middleware, such as databases, backup/restore systems and archiving solutions running on physical or virtual servers. Block-and-file protocols ? e.g., Fibre Channel (FC), Internet Small Computer System Interface (iSCSI), Network File System (NFS), Serial Attached SCSI (SAS) and SMB ? dominate this market. NVMe-oF, an emerging protocol designed to enhance the performance of solid-state arrays (SSAs), will not be supported by hybrid disk arrays or all hard-disk drive (HDD) arrays, perhaps other than those with flash-centric architectures delivering submillisecond response times. Gartner segments the external, controller-based storage market into the GPDA space, which includes all disk and hybrid arrays, and the SSA market. This market excludes SSA, object and distributed file system storage, as well as software-defined storage (SDS).
