The global Hand Wire Cutter market size is expected to reach $ million by 2030, rising at a market growth of % CAGR during the forecast period (2024-2030).

A hand wire cutter is a specialized type of cutter designed to precisely cut wires. The blade, positioned perpendicular to the handle, is capable of cleanly cutting nail heads and is also known as an end cutter. It's particularly effective for cutting metal wires such as steel, stainless steel, brass, and copper, creating a flat-cut surface.

Hand wire cutters come in various specifications, including blade length and shape, blade hardness, cutting ability, body and grip materials, and the presence of a spring. The choice depends on the intended use and work requirements.
