Abstracts

The global Hardshell Tent market size is expected to reach $ 605 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 6.6% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Hardshell tent, in this context, mainly refers to a vehicle-mounted hardshell rooftop tent (RTT) that uses a rigid top shell made of ABS, fiberglass, aluminum, or composite materials, and unfolds into an elevated sleeping space on a car, SUV, pickup, or off-road vehicle. Compared with soft-shell rooftop tents, hardshell models are typically more aerodynamic in transit, quicker to deploy, better protected against weather, and more premium in positioning, making them especially attractive for overlanding, road trips, and frequent short-stay camping. In 2025, Global Hardshell Tent sales are estimated at about 160 K Units, with an average ex-works price of about 2,350 US$/Unit .

The core growth driver of the hardshell tent market is the continued expansion of outdoor recreation and camping participation, which broadens the base of vehicle-based campers and lifts demand for more comfortable and premium gear. At the same time, the overlanding and 4x4 accessory ecosystem is maturing, with SEMA explicitly pointing to ongoing product innovation in categories such as rooftop tents, while official brand sites increasingly emphasize faster setup, lower-profile aerodynamics, better weather protection, and integrated cargo compatibility as reasons to trade up from ground tents or soft-shell RTTs. In practical terms, hardshell tents benefit from a strong ?premiumization + convenience? trend: buyers are paying for faster deployment, better shell protection, quieter highway travel, and improved aesthetics, which supports both ASP and margin versus entry-level camping products.
