The global Healthcare Group Purchasing Organization Service market size is expected to reach $ 2335 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 6.1% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

To address the challenges faced by healthcare institutions in procuring pharmaceuticals, consumables, and medical equipment, including weak bargaining power, complex supply chain management, and high procurement costs, healthcare group procurement organization services emerged. Since their inception in the late 20th century, the field of healthcare supply chain management has seen significant development. Currently, healthcare group procurement organization services encompass various models, including GPO (Group Purchasing Organization) models, third-party logistics integration, and digital procurement platforms. These services are widely used in public hospitals, private healthcare institutions, clinic chains, and elderly care and rehabilitation institutions, effectively reducing procurement costs, optimizing supply chain efficiency, and improving the accessibility of healthcare resources.

Healthcare group procurement organization (GPO) services, by integrating procurement needs, optimizing the supply chain, and applying digital technologies, have become a key tool for healthcare institutions to reduce costs and improve efficiency. Despite challenges such as procurement process efficiency, supplier management, and policy regulation, GPO services will continue to unleash market potential through strategies like digital transformation, supplier optimization, and policy responsiveness. This will drive the healthcare industry's procurement towards intensification, intelligence, and compliance, contributing core value to global healthcare cost savings and service quality improvement.
