Scope of the Report:

This report focuses on the Hygiene Nonwoven in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa. This report categorizes the market based on manufacturers, regions, type and application.

The use of medical protective clothing has been more than 100 years old, initially to prevent microbes from invading the sterile operating room and protecting patients from bacterial infections carried by medical personnel. After the 1980s, as medical personnel were at risk of infection at any time during surgery, the main role of medical protective clothing began to change to prevent the penetration and spread of viruses in the blood. In recent years, in order to prevent indirect infection and cross-infection of viruses caused by bacterial penetration, the requirements for medical protective materials are getting higher and higher. The research on medical protective equipment in developed countries such as Europe, America and Japan started earlier. Materials used for medical treatment, especially surgical gowns, surgical drapes and gowns, were gradually over-distributed to disposable materials. China is currently the largest production and processing base for disposable surgical gowns and protective clothing.

The disposable surgical gowns used in the world, 60% of which are produced and processed in China, various materials such as polypropylene spunbond, spunlace and SMS non-woven. The performance difference of the cloth is large. The exported surgical gown usually needs to be post-fluoride finishing, so that it has the functions of waterproof, anti-static, anti-blood, anti-alcohol, anti-gasoline, anti-bacterial, anti-microbial and anti-fouling, and achieves the effect of shielding protection.

The worldwide market for Hygiene Nonwoven is expected to grow at a CAGR of roughly 4.5% over the next five years, will reach 11200 million US$ in 2023, from 8570 million US$ in 2017, according to a new GIR (Global Info Research) study.
