Abstracts

Icing sugar, also called confectioners' sugar, Icing sugar, and Icing cake, is a finely ground sugar produced by milling granulated sugar into a Icing state. It usually contains a small amount of anti-caking agent to prevent clumping and improve flow. Although most often produced in a factory, Icing sugar can also be made by processing ordinary granulated sugar in a coffee grinder, or by crushing it by hand in a mortar and pestle.

SCOPE OF THE REPORT:

This report focuses on the Icing Sugar in global market, especially in North America, Europe and Asia-Pacific, South America, Middle East and Africa. This report categorizes the market based on manufacturers, regions, type and application. Icing sugar is utilized in industrial food production when a quick-dissolving sugar is required. Home cooks use it principally to make Icing or frosting and other cake decorations. It is often dusted onto baked goods to add a subtle sweetness and delicate decoration.

Icing sugar is available in varying degrees of fineness, most commonly XXX, XXXX, and 10X: the greater the number of Xs, the finer the particles.[1] Finer particles absorb more moisture, which results in caking. Corn starch or tricalcium phosphate is added at 3 to 5% concentration to absorb moisture and to improve flow by reducing friction between sugar crystals.[2][3] Because of these anticaking agents, it cannot always be used as a substitute for granulated sugar.

The worldwide market for Icing Sugar is expected to grow at a CAGR of roughly 8.3% over the next five years, will reach xx million US$ in 2023, from xx million US$ in 2017, according to a new GIR (Global Info Research) study.
