An In-flight Catering Meal refers to the food and beverages prepared and provided to passengers during a flight. These meals are produced by specialized airline catering companies, designed to meet airline safety standards, nutritional requirements, and passenger preferences. They vary by class (economy, business, first) and flight duration, and often include options for special diets such as vegetarian, halal, or gluten-free. In addition to enhancing passenger experience, in-flight meals are an essential part of airline service operations and logistics.
