Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Kosher Foods market size was valued at USD 9832.9 million in 2023 and is forecast to a readjusted size of USD 17750 million by 2030 with a CAGR of 8.8% during review period.

Kosher foods are those that conform to the Jewish dietary regulations of kashrut (dietary law), primarily derived from Leviticus and Deuteronomy. Food that may be consumed according to halakha(law) is termed kosher in English. Food that is not in accordance with law is called treif from Hebrew meaning 'torn'.

The classical rabbinical writers imply that milk from an animal whose meat is kosher is also kosher. As animals are considered non-kosher if after being slaughtered they are discovered to have been diseased; this could make their milk retroactively non-kosher. However, by adhering to the principle that the majority case overrules the exception, Jewish tradition continues to regard such milk as kosher, since statistically it is true that most animals producing such milk are kosher; the same principle is not applied to the possibility of consuming meat from an animal which has not been checked for disease.
