Abstracts

The natural habitat of Penaeus vannamei in South America is a muddy seabed, with a water depth of 0~72 meters. Most of the adult shrimp live in the coastal waters near the shore, while the young shrimp prefer to feed and grow in the estuary area with rich food. Penaeus vannamei is an omnivorous species, which can feed on the organic debris in the pond under the condition of artificial cultivation, and has high requirements on the curing rate of feed. The demand of Penaeus vannamei for animal food is not very strict. As long as the proportion of protein in the food component accounts for more than 20%, it can grow normally. Originated in the waters along the Pacific coast of South America, it is mainly distributed in the tropical waters along the Pacific coast of the western United States, from the Gulf of Mexico to the central part of Peru, especially in the waters near Ecuador.
