A medical enema machine is a medical device designed to deliver controlled and measured enema solutions into the rectum or colon for bowel cleansing, preoperative preparation, constipation management, or drug administration. The system typically consists of a fluid reservoir, tubing set, pressure or flow control unit, temperature control module, and safety monitoring components, enabling constant temperature, constant pressure, or precise volume infusion to enhance safety and patient comfort.

Upstream includes medical-grade plastics and silicone tubing, micro pumps, temperature control components, pressure sensors, and control circuits. Downstream applications include hospital gastroenterology departments, proctology clinics, health examination centers, and rehabilitation institutions. The overall industry gross margin generally ranges from 35% to 60%, with higher margins for intelligent temperature-controlled and automated models.

In 2025, the global production of medical enema machines was 2.98 million units, with an average price of US$127 per unit.
