Abstracts

The global Mine Grouting Pump market size is expected to reach $ 1775 million by 2032, rising at a market growth of 5.0% CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

A mine grouting pump is a specialized pumping system used in mines, tunnels, goaf areas, fractured zones, and underground engineering projects for ground reinforcement and water sealing. It injects cement slurry, chemical grout, bentonite slurry, or other consolidation materials into rock fractures, surrounding rock voids, or support structures under controlled pressure. The equipment is mainly used for water plugging, seepage prevention, rock mass reinforcement, cavity filling, and improving mine safety. It generally requires high pressure capability, wear resistance, anti-clogging performance, stable continuous delivery, and adaptability to harsh underground working conditions. In 2025, global Mine Grouting Pump production reached approximately 152 k Units, with an average global market price of around 8000 USD/Unit. The production capacity for Mine Grouting Pump in 2025 was approximately 180 k Units. The typical gross profit margin for Mine Grouting Pump between 20% and 40%.

The mine grouting pump market is mainly driven by the growing demand for mine safety, rock reinforcement, and water hazard control in coal mines, metal mines, non-metallic mines, and underground tunneling projects. As mining operations move deeper, mines face more complex geological conditions, including high ground stress, water inrush risks, fractured surrounding rock, and goaf settlement, which increases the demand for high-pressure, high-flow, automated, and intelligent grouting equipment. In the future, the market is expected to develop toward higher reliability, better wear and corrosion resistance, variable-frequency control, remote monitoring, and integrated grouting systems.

This report studies the global Mine Grouting Pump production, demand, key manufacturers, and key regions.
