Abstracts

The global Molasses market size is expected to reach $ million by 2032, rising at a market growth of %CAGR during the forecast period (2026-2032).

Molasses, commonly known as syrup, is a by-product of sugar making. The waste that cannot be condensed into crystals during the sugar making process is the molasses. It is generally a brown-black viscous liquid and contains a large amount of fermentable sugar. Therefore, it is a good raw material for fermentation, and can be used as substrate or base of yeast, monosodium glutamate, organic acid and other fermented products, as well as raw materials for certain foods and animal feeds.

Among the different types of molasses, the cane molasses held the maximum market share with about 87% in 2019.

For applications of the molasses, the yeast is the largest segment with a market share of nearly 49% in 2019.

This report studies the global Molasses production, demand, key manufacturers, and key regions.

This report is a detailed and comprehensive analysis of the world market for Molasses and provides market size (US$ million) and Year-over-Year (YoY) Growth, considering 2025 as the base year.
