Abstracts

According to our (Global Info Research) latest study, the global Non-Core Business Outsourcing Service market size was valued at USD million in 2022 and is forecast to a readjusted size of USD million by 2029 with a CAGR of % during review period. The influence of COVID-19 and the Russia-Ukraine War were considered while estimating market sizes.

Global economic integration and the rapid development of IT technology provide conditions for the emergence of BPO. In addition, with the improvement of living standards, people have more personalized consumption demands, which means higher requirements for enterprises, forcing enterprises to change the mode of operation and management, make full use of their own resources, but also be good at using the advantages of external resources. In order to promote their core competitiveness can be constantly improved, and the new management mode of BPO is in line with the needs of enterprise development.

The original BPO service providers were subsidiaries of some multinational companies. They were established mainly because the parent company set up subsidiaries in areas with low labor costs to deal with non-core but essential business of the parent company for the purpose of making better use of world resources. Subsequently, along with the rapid development of information technology and economy, the market demand for BPO service enterprises keeps growing, thus the emergence of professional BPO service companies. These specialized BPO service companies not only provide services to the head office, but also provide service outsourcing services to other enterprises.

Different from the business philosophy of traditional enterprises, the emergence of BPO enables the company to free limited resources from non-core business and concentrate them on core business, thus improving the overall efficiency of the enterprise. For example, companies can outsource back-office services such as personnel and finance to improve processes and optimize operating costs.
