Abstracts

Online group therapy service is exactly what it sounds like—group therapy that occurs online via video conferencing tools, like Zoom. Group therapy is collaborative and evidenced-based, mental health treatment approach used to support and guide individuals in addressing challenges such as depression, anxiety, grief, addiction, anger, life transitions, and other psychosocial stressors. Simply put, group therapy is the treatment of multiple individuals at once by one or more mental health professionals, and can be used as a treatment modality for a range of conditions including trauma, anxiety, depression, attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), among others. Individuals dealing with similar conditions can receive both treatment and support in this group setting. The length of each group therapy session, as well as the duration of sessions, tend to be very individualized.
